BLACKSHIRTS IN BRITAIN BEING TAKEN SERIOUSLY

Although They Are Still Laughed At by Many British Intellectuals

FASCISM "IMPOSSIBLE" Parliament Takes Its Threat Seriously Enough To Propose Protection

Note: British audiences are taking Sir Oswald Mosley and his British Blackshirts seriously, H. R. Knickerbocker writes in the fourth article of his series on Fascism in England. Even audiences hostile at the start are responding to Mosley's speeches with enthusiasm ominously reminiscent of the German cheers that met Adolf Hitler in the early days of his campaigning. Knickerbocker states.

BRISTOL, Eng., Apr. 27—(INS)—British Blackshirts are still laughed at by many British intellectuals. But British audiences are taking them seriously.

Fascism is still declared an impossibility by British Liberals. But the British Parliament has taken the threat of Fascism seriously enough to propose police measures to suppress the movement.

Sir Oswald Mosley, head of the British Blackshirts, is still sniffed at by his former Tory and Labor party colleagues. But Mosley is speaking today in every part of Britain to audiences that have long outgrown the smaller halls, and that respond to him with an enthusiasm ominously reminiscent of the German cheers that met the ears of Adolf Hitler in his early days.

Few of Mosley's intellectual critics have heard Mosley speak, few of those who take the menace of Black-shirt Fascism lightly in Britain have had a chance to compare the early days of the Mosley movement in this country with the early days of the Hitler movement in Germany.

It is much too early to say whether Mosley will be the Hitler of Britain. It is not too early to say that under certain conditions he could be. These conditions do not now obtain. But already Mosley and his Blackshirt bodyguard are able to penetrate the very headquarters of their worst enemies, the Labor party, address hostile audiences and go away admitted victors with numerous recruits.

Bristol, the ancient port, a worker's town with its 400,000 inhabitants, most of whom are employed in the chocolate, tobacco and shipping industries, is a stronghold of left-wing Socialism. The Labor party firebrand, Sir Stafford Cripps, holds his seat in Parliament from this district. The Bristol Socialists are the type of Reds who take the place of Communists in the political philosophy of the Blackshirts. For Mosley to appear here as though Hitler, in the infancy of his movement, should have come up from Munich and dared to try to hold a meeting in front of the Communist Karl Liebknecht House in the heart of one-time Rer Berlin.

Before the Colston Hall, largest auditorium in the city, a crowd had gathered to wait the coming of Mosley. They waited to give him an unpleasant reception. The crowd grew to several thousand. Police herded them patiently. Up and down marched two men bearing sandwich boards. The boards bore the slogans: "Flee from the wrath to come!" "No man can serve two masters!" "After death the judgment!" and "God says the wicked shall be turned into hell!"

The sandwich-men were merely taking advantage of the crowd to make a little religious propaganda. Every now and then someone yelled "Down with the Fascists." Presently the lone yells grew to a roar. The Blackshirts marched up. Police cleared a way for them.

Behind them, into the hall poured the multitude. The advance guard climbed over seats. The hall holds 4,000. The cheapest seats cost 25 cents but it was jammed full and police closed the doors long before time for the meeting to start. Of the 4,000 persons present certainly 3,000 or more came to jeer Mosley. Against the 3,000, mostly workmen eager for a row, Mosley had his Blackshirts numbering not more than 300. They were ranged around the hall after the traditional fashion of Hitler's black-coated guard.

From a loud-speaker came the old familiar pot-pourri: Blue Danube, March from Carmen, ancient favorites. Girls in black blouses, gray skirts, moved through the audience selling blackshirt literature. Around the walls hung posters: "Fascism is practical patriotism;" "Fascism stands for King and Empire;" "Fascism demands justice for unemployed!" These thin slogans underline the attempt of the British Blackshirts to appear above all British and respectable.

CATTLE TESTING IDEA SPREADS OVER COUNTY

It Is Expected That Every District Will Soon Be In Line

3 MORE HAVE APPLIED

By the end of the current year, according to County Agent William F. Greenawalt, Doylestown, all of Bucks county's cattle population of approximately 23,000, it is confidently expected, will have been subjected to the tests for bovine tuberculosis either under the individual or the area testing plans.

Mr. Greenawalt, who for a number of years has been devoting his efforts to having the cattle in the county tested for bovine tuberculosis in an attempt to rid this county of the disease among cattle, revealed this week that already 19 of the 31 districts in the county are operating under either of the two plans.

Three other districts have signed up for the tests which will begin there in a very short time and contacts have been made by Mr. Greenawalt in the townships of Bensalem, Bristol, Lower Makefield, Upper Southampton, Lower Southampton, Warminster and Northampton for the purpose of interesting the dairymen in having their cattle tested.

This leaves but two districts in the entire county that have not been approached on the subject. They are Falls in the lower part and Bridgeton in the extreme upper part. Mr. Greenawalt will contact the farmers in Falls township next Monday evening and it is possible that he will approach the farmers in Bridgeton township the following evening.

The three townships recently having signed for the tests are Milford, West Rockhill and East Rockhill, all in the western part of the county.

Bucks, according to Mr. Greenawalt, is one of the four counties in the State, where the testing of cattle has not been completed. The others are Chester, Montgomery and Berks.

About 90 per cent. of the cattle throughout the entire State have been tested either under the individual or area plans and about the same proportion have been tested under the same plans in Bucks county.

It is revealed in the survey that approximately 12,200 head of cattle have been subjected to the area tests in the 19 townships. There are approximately 1,800 head in the townships of Milford, West Rockhill and East Rockhill so that within the next few weeks at least 14,000 head of cattle will have been subjected to the tests.

A number of townships in the lower part of the county have been organized for the purpose of considering the testing of the cattle. These districts and their chairmen are as follows: Bensalem, Joseph Canby, Jr.; Bristol, C. G. Dieterich; Lower Makefield, Amos Satterthwaite; Upper Southampton, William Hawkins; Lower Southampton, Howard B. Austin; Warminster, Joseph Hollowell, and Northampton, Joseph Rook. Howard Shelly is chairman in Milford township, William Wile in West Rockhill and O. S. Keeler in East Rockhill.

According to records kept in the office of Mr. Greenawalt, the testing of cattle under the area plan was started in Bucks County in 1927, this having been inaugurated in Solebury and Wrightstown. Activities the following year were brought to a temporary halt, but in 1929 another township, Buckingham, had its cattle tested under the area plan. One more, Upper Makefield, was added to the list in August 1930. Warwick and Durham followed in 1931 and Springfield and Nockamixon in 1932.

The past year so far has been the banner one for the adoption of the tests in the county. It was during 1933 that Bedminster, Haycock, New Britain, Richland, Doylestown and Hilltown procured sufficient signatures of the dairymen to proceed with the testing of the cattle.

So far this year five districts have inaugurated the testing of the cattle. They are Tinicum, Plumstead, Newtown, Warrington and Middletown.

Although County Agent Greenawalt has been very actively engaged in other agricultural projects throughout the county, the attempt to eradicate bovine tuberculosis from this section of the State has been one of his hobbies and it is expected the plan which he inaugurated more than five years ago will be brought to a reality by the end of the current year.

YOUTH WEEK DRIVE OPENS HERE TONIGHT

Every Resident to Be Solicited For Dollar Contribution To the Cause

EXPECT A BIG RESPONSE

Wherever the subject of Youth Week is being discussed, favorable comments are heard on the Committee's plan for raising funds to finance the undertaking.

One business man when approached regarding a donation, said: "Of course I will donate a dollar. The plan sponsored by the Committee to raise the amount necessary, through one dollar subscriptions, is a most laudable one, and I feel certain it will meet with abundant success. Just now business is anything but good, and to have been asked to contribute five or ten dollars would have been unjust. But because of the good judgment of the committee in placing the amount of the donation asked for, within the reach of all, the response cannot help, but be hearty and generous."

Some of the committee who have already started their canvass, report a most cheerful willingness on the part of the citizens to contribute. When the plan is explained and the feasibility of raising the amount required through dollar subscriptions is realized, without exception the donation is cheerfully and quickly given, and the donor expresses pleasure in being asked.

Today between the hours of four and seven o'clock the young people who compose the different ward committees, will visit the different homes in their respective wards and solicit donations. The citizens should remember that if they feel that they cannot afford to contribute a dollar, then any amount which they can afford will be appreciated even as low as ten cents.

At eight o'clock tonight in the Elks' Home, the collectors will meet the finance committee and turn over the amounts which they have collected. At the meeting last evening, the following in the different wards were appointed to take charge of the collection.

First ward—Irrving Granoff, Eleanor Moore.
Second ward—Edward Tracy and Mrs. John Wicher.
Third ward—John Hess, Frances Blanche.
Fourth ward—Margaret Pope, Clifford Snyder.
Fifth ward—David Neill, Ruth Walker.
Sixth ward—Chauncey Stoneback, Jr., Mrs. George Croner.

THREE KILLED; 22 INJURED

Chicopee, Mass., April 27—Three persons were killed and 22 others injured today, several critically, when gas main explosions demolished four homes and damaged 15 others in Chicopee Falls. The dead were Mrs. Mary Promko, 40, and two unidentified persons. A series of four explosions in rapid fire succession blew one home apart and laid it flat on the ground and demolished three other homes. Small fires which followed the explosion in three houses were extinguished by firemen. The detonations were so terrific they could be heard for miles around, and the force felt for more than a quarter of a mile. Leaking mains under the ground were believed to have allowed gas to seep into the homes, resulting in the blasts.

SILVER PROBE FAILS

Washington, D. C., April 27—A proposed Senate inquiry into silver speculation virtually collapsed today after a trio of reports from the Treasury failed to disclose existence of a "ring" of silver gamblers. The reports, on the contrary, proved that the largest traders in silver futures, both long and short, were great banks and business concerns operating to protect their investments against a fluctuating market.

AWAIT CLARIFICATION OF ISSUE

Washington, D. C., April 27—The United States will await clarification of Japan's "hands off China" policy before taking any steps in the Far East situation, either singly or in concert with Great Britain or other powers. This was ascertained today following President Roosevelt's conference with Secretary of State Hull and almost daily conferences between State Department officials and diplomatic representatives of other powers having interests in the Orient. An International News Service dispatch from Tokyo today reporting that the Japanese government had decided to yield to foreign pressure and amplify its new policy toward China, was read with interest by State Department officials.

MACHADO STILL MISSING

New York City, April 27—Gerardo Machado, ex-President of Cuba, was still among the missing today although the impression prevailed that the exiled statesman was merely biding his time before surrendering to Federal authorities. ANTIQUE EXHIBIT IS ATTRACTING MANY

Wonderful Collection is Now On Exhibition at Doylestown Country Club

FAVORABLE COMMENT

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 27—Close to 20,000 rare old pieces, the kind that have made Bucks county famous throughout the country among collectors, dealers and admirers of antiques, are being exhibited this week at the first annual Bucks County Antique Exhibition that opened Wednesday night in the ball room of the Doylestown Country Club. The show will continue daily until Saturday evening, open from 10 a. m. until 10:30 p. m.

The pieces in the show are conservatively estimated to be valued at upwards of $30,000. So unusually attractive is the show that people from several states attended the formal opening Wednesday. During the remainder of the week some of the outstanding collectors and dealers of the country will visit the show.

In the opinion of the country's best dealers, the Doylestown show, even though it is the initial exhibition, has been described as one of the finest that has ever been held outside the large cities of the East.

Unlike many of the other exhibitions, all of the exhibits at the Bucks County show are for sale. The exhibition is sponsored by a group of outstanding dealers who have brought their best pieces for the show.

With the success of the first show absolutely assured, plans will be made in the near future to stage a Bucks-Montgomery county exhibit next year in Doylestown if it is possible to secure an exhibition room large enough to stage such a show.

One of the most striking exhibits in the premier show is the display of old prints and maps being shown by Major Abel MacReynolds, of Doylestown. Classified Ads Deliver the Goods

BOYS AND GIRLS TO OPEN YOUTH WEEK WITH BIG PARADE

Expect Two Thousand Will March Through The Streets Here

REQUEST FLAG DISPLAY

Each Group Striving to Surpass Rivals in Matter of Appearance

Plans have been completed for the opening of Youth Week here tomorrow, when a monster parade of girls and boys will be held as the initial feature. It is expected there will be at least two thousand boys and girls in line and all of the six wards in Bristol, as well as Edgely and Croydon, will be represented in the line of march.

Each of the districts is pitted against each other in the matter of making the most attractive appearance and the youths are on keen edge, eager to capture the prizes.

The marshal of the parade, Walter F. Leedom, has sent instructions to each captain, giving details as to where each group is to meet and form for the parade and the position they will take in the line.

Mr. Leedom will head the parade and will be driven in the automobile of Francis Lefferts. Mr. Leedom's granddaughter, Charlotte Cadwallader, of Yardley, will drive the car, and his grandson, Walter Cadwallader, will carry an American flag.

Following Mr. Leedom there will be a detail of police officers and then the children from Croydon will follow. The Croydon delegation will be accompanied by the Cadet Bugle Corps of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. The Croydon group will form at Jefferson avenue and Radcliffe street with right resting on Jefferson avenue.

The Edgely delegation will be the next in line and will form on Radcliffe street, back of the Croydon group.

The American Legion Cadet Corps will lead the six wards of Bristol and will follow Edgely in the line of march. Boys and girls of the First Ward will form on Jefferson avenue with right resting on Radcliffe street.

Second Ward group will form on Jefferson avenue with right resting on Cedar street, and will follow the First Ward delegation.

Third Ward Harmonica Band will be the next in line and will be followed by the Third Ward with right resting on Wood street.

The St. Francis Industrial School Band, Edgington, will head the Fourth Ward boys and girls and they will form on Jefferson avenue, between Wood and Pond streets.

Fifth Ward will form on Jefferson avenue with right on Pond street, and the Sixth Ward will form on Pond street with right resting on Jefferson avenue.

The girls will lead each district with the boys following.

The parade will start promptly at one o'clock on the second bugle call. If there are any mounted on horses these will take places at the end of the line.

Residents along the route of the parade are asked to display flags and otherwise decorate their premises.

The route of the parade will be as follows:

Radcliffe street, to Mill, Bath, Buckley, New Buckley, Washington, Pond, Farragut avenue, Jackson street, to Wilson avenue.

The parade will disband at the high school where each boy and girl parading will be given a ticket for refreshments.

PRICE OF EXCHANGE SEATS

A seat on the New York stock exchange sold the other day for $83,000. In 1929, the boom year, $625,000 was paid for one.

The difference represents a big drop. The low point was reached immediately following President Roosevelt's demand for a stock exchange regulation law with "teeth in it." Shortly preceding the threat of Federal regulation of the exchange, a seat sold for $190,000. The regulation threat, therefore, must be considered as having had a depressing effect on the market for exchange seats.

The inference, of course, is that those who hold exchange seats believe their opportunity to make profits in stock trading under Federal regulation would be less than under the present system.

Outside of this, however, it is evident that the value of exchange seats has declined correspondingly with the drop in stocks since 1929. The decline in sale price from $625,000 to $190,000 is evidence of this.

The public probably is too intent with its other interests to give a great deal of attention to the price of exchange seats. Yet, the situation more or less reflects industrial conditions generally. A rise in the price of exchange seats would indicate an encouraging business outlook.

APPEAL OF BEAUTY

Raymond M. Hood, noted architect, is quoted as saying that among all the arts, including architecture, painting, sculpture, furniture designing and the like, highest standards have been attained in automobile design.

No one will quarrel with him over that point, but the loudest amens will come from the owners of models 12 months old or older. While the remarkable progress made in automobile design is demonstrated on every day, it can best be appreciated by the driver of a car of a discarded design.

The automobile has become, besides an absolute necessity and a tremendous promoter of comfort, well-being and prosperity, a thing of genuine artistic merit. And Mr. Hood makes clear the reason.

It was because the automobile designers were not tricked into seeking beauty just for the sake of it. They made use and service the primary objectives and enlisted beauty to enhance it.

Improvements in design account for countless sales every year, just as mechanical advances do. The car owner who buys a new car every year or two is actuated as much by changes in body design as by mechanical innovations and the desire to have a new car.

Some fathers are frantic when daughter is out with a boy and others were afraid of girls in their youth.

Urging public support of music, Bandmaster Goldman of New York says good musicians are never mixed up in gangs and rackets. If they're good, it is called a symphony.

Now that science has discovered a link between the brains and shoulder blades "Julius Caesar" will have to be revised thusly: "The fat, dear Brutus, is not in our stars; but in our shoulder blades."

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS

By ANN PAGE

IT SEEMS probable that heavy rains in the South will curtail the shipments of strawberries, tomatoes, green beans and potatoes. The supply of other fruits and green vegetables should not be seriously affected.

Navel oranges are attractively priced as are also large juice oranges. Spring is gradually spreading over the country bringing rhubarb as the first native product of the gardens. It is almost as desirable to have a cabbage in the house as to have onions, carrots and parsley. It is such a good vegetable, lends itself to variety in cooking and in salads and it keeps very well. Asparagus and even peas and beans come and go but cabbage goes round the calendar with us. The Quaker Maid suggests the following menus.

Low Cost Dinner
Pot Roast of Beef
Potatoes, Carrots, Onions
Bread and Butter
Banana Shortcake
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie Parsley Potatoes
Green Peas
Bread and Butter
Jelly Roll Milk

Very Special Dinner
Tomato Juice Cocktail Crackers
Roast Veal Potatoes in Cream
Buttered Asparagus
Spring Salad French Dressing
Rolls and Butter
Fruit Cup Coconut Cake
Coffee Milk

'THE LONE WOLF'S SON'

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XXXIII

Left alone with the guard, Maurice had a look round the sitting-room that confirmed him in his poor opinion of the Bellamy. It was hard to understand what the family physician could have been thinking of, to have lodged Fenno's father in such a hole. If his hurts had been so slight that he could be moved in from the street to these grubby accommodations, one would think he might as readily have been conveyed to his own home. If serious, surely he should have been taken straightway to some hospital of the first class.

Baffled understanding could only fall back on the reflection that every country has its peculiar customs—ways often at first sight quite illogical in alien eyes.

Maurice idly moved round the table and shifted a chair, so that he might sit down without squaring himself at his companion. Something thumped on the floor; and the guard, with profanity, plumped to his knees and retrieved a corkless bottle which had been left standing beneath the chair as it stowed there in haste for want of a handier hiding-place.

"Good grief!" he lamented, getting up. "Almost that was a tragedy, fella. However, I guess there wasn't any spilled to speak of. I got to hand it to me—I'm one spry lil' gal when liquor's in peril."

He grinned at Maurice over the bottle as he had a ravished sniff at its neck.

"Right stuff! Suppose I and you treat ourselves to a shot; how about it?"

"I haven't any taste for whisky. But don't let me prevent you."

"Hot chance!" The humorist slopped a stiff dram into one of the used glasses, took it raw, and smacked lips of gusto. "Maybe you know best about your drinkin', but they's one thing you don't know, and that's what you're missin'."

"I'm sure."

"A singular geniality had already distinguished his earlier insolence; it was strangely as if the creature had made up his mind to forgive Maurice the misfortune of being a foreigner, and by treating him as an equal, make full amends. 'You're scared, account of all you've heard tell about rot-gut passin' for hooch over here. Well, believe it or not, you got no call to be in this hotel; anything a person gets here is right—genuine import goods that ain't even been unkerled, let alone cut, before they buy it.'"

"One is to understand you are well acquainted here?"

"With this dump? Only like I am with the palms of my hands." The man slouched down in his chair, offered cigarettes, and when Maurice politely declined, lighted one for himself. "Why wouldn't I be? Don't I live here?"

"You live here!"

"I bet me your life. Anything funny about that?"

"Only, I dare say, to one accustomed as I am to look at such matters from a European viewpoint. To me, I confess, it seems curious that a wage-earner should be able to afford American hotel tariffs. I can only infer that the difference between your wage-scale and ours accounts for it, monseigneur."

The guard, sitting with his head cocked at a quizzical angle, and giving his ironical grin full play again, permitted a surprising volume of smoke to drain off through his nostrils before replying:

"Ain't tryin' to kid me or anything, are you, fella?"

"But I do not know you well enough to jest with you on personal matters."

To this, after another instant of silent speculation, the guard returned with a wag of a defeated head:

"All I can say is, one of us is all wet."

A good-natured shrug conveyed that Maurice was content to let that pass. If his course in the American vernacular under Tess Boyce was incomplete, if it had yet to put him on speaking terms with "all wet," the tone rang true to the guard's general attitude with him. He made no doubt but that he was being kidded—but it didn't matter. The only thing that really irked him was a feeling that the time was long since Fenno had gone in to see her father. And when he turned his ears for the rumor of voices in the bed-chamber, he could detect none.

Odd, that—with four people in there, and a door between that looked anything but sound-proof.

Maurice frowned, got up, and moved to the window. Its view of a segment of New York by night might at any other time have inter-hold of the knob and threw the door wide.

The guard at the same time sat forward to grind out the coal of his tobacco on the tray. A burst of French expletives behind him had no effect on this display of phlegm; only when the boy flung back to catch him by a shoulder and stand over him with hot eyes in a face bleached by passion, did he consent to put on a look of innocent astonishment.

"Where are they? There's nobody in that room! What does this mean? Where have they taken Fenno?"

"The Crozier kid? She's all

"Where are they. There's nobody in this room! Where have they taken Fenno?"

ested him; now it diverted his mind, not at all. He turned back, aware that eyes alive with malice were following him, and to stave off a resumption of amenities, he stopped at a telephone stand and took up the directory. Simple curiosity prompted him to look for his listings under "Gotham"; and having done so, he thoughtfully replaced the book and looked again to the guard.

"Isn't it strange that the Gotham Safe Deposit Company should have no telephone connection?"

"Maybe," its representative allowed.

"But its administration must have an office."

"Says you."

"What does that mean? I said no more than is obvious. Do you mind telling me where the office is?"

"All in your eye, fella—all in your eye."

"Forgive me if I fail to follow you."

"That's all right."

The liberality of this assurance was offset by intimation of mockery broader than any yet and by none of an intention to explain the anomaly away. And of a sudden, exasperated, Maurice faced about, strode to the bed-chamber door and thumped it with peremptory knuckles.

No one answered.

He knocked again, looked back to see the other covering him with a glimmer of lazy amusement and—at last all out of patience—said right." A shake dislodged Maurice's hand. Don't sweat yourself so, fella, and don't be so gay with your mitts, or somebody's liable to crown you. Sit down and pant it off and have a drink. Nobody's goin' to do you dirt. The lil' dame's been' took good care of, and so are the emeralds. All you got to do is sit tight and say nothin', and you'll get your cut when the time comes."

Maurice survived a moment when he felt he must struggle for inability either to contain or to give tongue to his rage. Unconsciously he put up a hand to ease the bind of his collar. "Damn you!" he stammered. I should have suspected! I might have known—

"You ought to've." The man in uniform gave a sympathetic nod. "I said it was a shame not to tip you off, but the crowd was afraid of how you'd handle, afraid you'd r'ar back on us, maybe, and paw the air and spoil the show before we got you gentled. They claimed the bunch that crossed with you knew their business, and if they hadn't seen fit to put you hep, it was better we should put the job through first and let you work your mad off when it was too late."

"So that was it," the boy rumbled, in a stare,—"that's the explanation!"

"Sho, sho! We got the works by wireless soon's you and the cutie took off from the ship; and I'm here to tell you that didn't give us too much time to get everything all set—"

Typical House and Garden Model for World's Fair Village

GARDEN CLUBS BUILD WORLD'S FAIR VILLAGE

Will Show American Community of the Future as They Envision It

The American home town of the future as the garden club movement hopes to rebuild it, will be on exhibition in the Horticultural building at A Century of Progress this year.

The Society of American Florists, which is in charge of horticulture at the fair, has announced a competition for the construction, on a miniature scale, of models depicting the ideal house and garden of the present day.

These models, meticulously reproducing every exterior detail of dwelling and grounds, with lawn, shrubs, trees and flowers in realistic coloring, all expertly planned, will be assembled in an ideal village which will be laid out and built by city planners.

Prizes to Be Awarded

Any club, society, school, church, or individual may enter a model which must represent a house on a lot 75 x 150 feet, constructed on the scale of 1/4 inch to the foot. There is no entry fee, and for the six best models entered liberal cash prizes will be paid, in addition to gold, silver and bronze medals. The judging will be done on the following scale of points:

- Layout of house and grounds...30
- Design of the garden picture...25
- Practical nature of the planting...25
- Workmanship, scale and finish...20

Every Unit Complete

The village in which the model homes will be assembled, will be complete, with parks, churches, business center, and all utilities constructed according to the most modern ideas of city planners. For every home a complete plan must be submitted which will be on display for the benefit of those seeking ideas for home building.

Entries should be forwarded to the Horticultural Exhibit, Amateur Contest Committee 845 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill. Detailed specifications concerning the contest with a circular of instructions on how the models should be built will be forwarded to all entrants. Models which are accepted and placed in the village will be on display throughout the period of the fair, and each will be identified so that visitors may know who entered it.

Regular use of the Courier classified column is economical and profitable. Phone 2717.—(Adv.)

All About Onion Sets

To grow young green onions from seed requires a longer time than growing them from sets, and for this reason the onion set is provided as a convenience for the home gardener who desires to quickly produce green onions.

It is not generally known that only small onion sets should be used in the garden when the objective is mature dry onions. In general, early planting, other things being equal, gives better results than later plantings. When mature dry onions are the end in view, the onion sets should not be planted very deep, just deep enough so that the onion set is covered.

For the production of green onions for bunching or table use larger sets are better than the very small ones. Onion sets from 3/4 inch to 1 inch in diameter or slightly larger, grow faster, because there has been stored up in the bulb plant food which is quickly

Planting season is here, the yearning for fresh home-grown vegetables having been felt weeks ago by last year's gardeners, and it is time to polish up the hoes and rakes, and get the soil into condition. If you look about you, you will find many of the neighbors doing just this, and you will also find a smile on their faces, as if it were the fruition of a long hoped-for desire. And it is, too, for the gardener looks forward to the spring season with avid thoughts of tiny seedlings and the smell of the warming earth.

Perhaps you, too, would like to put in the ground, and raise your share of the healthful vegetables that should be a large part of every family menu. If so, why are you lagging behind? Is it because you don't have a big plot of ground? Or, are you still wondering if it would be worthwhile?

made available for the growing plant, and green onions grown from larger sets are likely to be more crisp and tender than when the same size of green onion is produced from smaller sets. For green onions it is advisable to plant onion sets about 2 inches below the surface. So that there will be a succession, many home gardeners plant onion sets at intervals of a week to ten days. White onion sets are the most popular for the production of green onions, but yellows are frequently used, and if one does not object to the color, red onion sets may be also used for this purpose.

In planting onion sets one does not have to wait until all the frost is out of the ground, or until all danger from frosts is past.

From 15 to 30 pounds of large onions can be produced from 1 quart of onion sets which do not run more than 3/4 inch in diameter. At prevailing retail values of both onions and onion sets, from a dollar's worth of onion sets from twelve to twenty-five dollars' worth of onions can be produced.

If it is space you are worrying about, it might be helpful to you to know that any small amount of ground is large enough to raise some kind of garden. Even 5 by 5 feet will suffice to take care of the needs of the baby's greens, and on a plot 10 feet square you can do this and raise all the lettuce and radishes a family of five can eat, with a succession crop of string beans or peas. With good cultivation, sufficient moisture, and the proper amount of fertilizer, you can do wonders in a small space.

If it is indecision that is stopping you, here are a few facts which should be interesting. Medical men agree that most of the health giving properties of food come from vegetables, but that those same vegetables lose fully half of their value when allowed to stand on the market for only a short period of time. Your neighbor gardener will tell you that you can raise your own vegetables for a fraction of the cost you would pay on the market.

Besides the health and economy from home-raised vegetables, they are infinitely better tasting. Corn loses its sweetness in a few hours. Only fresh-cut lettuce can be crisp, and who wants soggy radishes that have stood in the market for days?

Grow your own garden this year, no matter how small it may have to be. Start planning for it right now.

Rainy days, when the garden is too soggy to work in, will be more pleasant if you can sit down to an interesting book, and learn more about your flowers and vegetables.

New Gardens for Old (Doubleday, Doran) will prove interesting to the small home gardener who wishes definite information on how to reconstruct his landscape. Theory, planting varieties, detailed plans, weather zones, and other helpful angles are treated in a practical way, so that the book may be used for this purpose without the aid of an experienced landscape architect. Several helpful plans are included, and the many photographs and drawings illustrate just how and why changes should be made. Written by two experienced landscape architects, it is to be recommended to the gardener who intends to make a change this spring or summer.

The Plant World in Florida (Macmillan) is a notable contribution to plant lovers in our southernmost state, as well as a source of information which will doubtlessly become a standard index to tropical and semi-tropical plants in this country. It is a compilation of the published manuscripts of Dr. Henry Nehrling, who for 43 years kept copious notes on planting and experiments on his two tropical gardens. Although edited and condensed by Alfred and Elizabeth Kay from scattered sources, it breathes much of the character of the jungle hermit, who thought of his lonely existence as a tropical paradise.

Gardening With Herbs, by Helen Morgenthau Fox (Macmillan) is especially timely because of the renewed interest in herbs. Here is a definitive "biography" of some 60 herbs that may be grown in this country, with their history, uses, habits, taste and smell, set forth in a manner which will, and should, appeal to many a curious gardener. Mrs. Fox's book is a welcome addition to the few volumes we have on herbs, and the folklore associated with her subject makes the work interesting even to the city apartment-dweller whose knowledge of gardening comes from a window box. Beautifully bound and illustrated, it will be a valued addition to any library.

Alarmed studio officials forbade Jean Muir to play polo, but now she has hopped off a horse into an airplane.

The youthful Warner star, who has out-Hopburned Hepburn, says she is going to fly and defies her employers to stop her.

Jean isn't satisfied to be just a passenger either. She plans to go after a pilot's license, starting her lessons immediately under the guidance of Art Kline, former war flyer with Rickenbacker, and now transportation manager for the Warner studios.

The rumor-hounds will tell you that George Brent is responsible for Jean's sudden interest in aviation. The two are seen together frequently since Brent's separation from Ruth Chatterton and the actor, who has a brand new pilot's license himself, made a date to take Jean for a sky-ride on Thursday.

Meanwhile, the pair are being considered for a picture together.

Did you hear about the hilarious mistake the radio announcer made when Adolphe Menjou went on the air the other night to talk on fashions for men.

"Ladies and gentlemen," spied the voice on the microphone, "I want to introduce Adolphe Menjou, the best dressed actor on the screen."

Irene Dunne is the latest to succumb to the back-to-the-land movement. The star writes she has just purchased a country estate in Virginia, not far from the property of another Hollywoodite, Ralph Bellamy.

Irene is having the time of her life on her visit and wants R-K-O to give her six months off so she and her husband, Dr. Francis Griffen, can vacation in their Virginia home. He is a New York medico and can come down week-ends.

Legends mount about W. C. Fields and his new stage, Tammany Young. The comedian won't go on with his act at Hollywood affairs unless the master of ceremonies also gives Young credit. There is a free ride and take of wisecracks between dancing. In bingo and bowling prizes were awarded. For the bingo game, prizes were given to Misses Hester Boyle, Bessie Rafferty, Frances Dougherty, Jane Lynn, Margaret McIlvaine, Ella McFadden, Mrs. Carl Winch and Mrs. Warren Armstrong, Sr. Prizes were given to Miss Elizabeth Cunningham, Miss Margaret Dougherty and Mrs. Stacy Cullen, for the bowling game.

A lunch was served. The tables were decorated with bouquets of cut flowers.

Members from the first ward entertained. Mrs. John Lawler was chair-lady and other members were Mrs. Neil McIlvaine, Miss Margaret McFadden, Miss Addie Gallagher. This committee was also assisted by the Misses Mary McGee, Margaret and Mary Roarty and Marguerite McFadden.

the pair and Young has more influence than anyone else over the whimsical comedian. As a last resort, the studio appealed to him the other day to try to get Fields over for costume fittings.

The following telephone conversation is reported between the two: "Mr. Meadows, I want you over here immediately."

"You wouldn't talk to me like that if I were there."

"Oh yeah? If you were here, I'd punch you right on the nose."

"You can't do that," shouted Fields. "It's my favorite prop."

Pictures are farthest from Clara Bow's mind these days, her friends report. The red-head and Rex Bell have finally tired of Palm Springs and are headed for their ranch where they will stay (as Rex puts it) as long as Clara can stand it. You'd never guess who is scheduled to pay them a visit. The Clark Gables.

Even if Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer hadn't decided to take over the funeral, the body of Karl Dane would not have gone to a pauper's grave. Unaware of the studio's action, Carl Brisson, Paramount player and a total stranger to the dead actor, sent word to the morgue that he would pay burial expenses. It was the gesture of a fellow countryman. Both came from Denmark.

To my knowledge, King Vidor's "Our Daily Bread" is the first instance of extras actually living on the set of a picture.

The director has built a model village on location and several atmosphere people have moved into the little colony. The Vidor film deals with the back-to-the-land movement and with cooperative industry. His figures say that, in Southern California alone, 200,000 people are trading services through various cooperative agencies.

Did you know? That Elizabeth Young, Paramount starlet, survived a broken back when she was in a motor accident in Montana in 1928?

town, whose collection has attracted attention of individuals and museums throughout the country. The entire east wall of the hall room is attractively arranged with the MacReynolds collection. An interesting piece although it is but thirty-eight years old, is a colored lithograph of Doylestown Borough, showing all the homes and business places of that period. Ashland Street east of Main street is shown on the map as Afton avenue and there were no houses in the block between Oakland avenue and Ashland street on the east side of Main with the exception of the home of Mrs. Joseph Swartzlander.

Exceptionally fine displays of Jersey glass, and Sandwich glass have been grouped by the various exhibitors. The display of lusterware in the exhibit of J. Fabian Cooper, Tullytown, is an outstanding feature of the show.

There is an unusually fine display of settees, old bureaus, tables and corner cupboards. One of the very old and rare pieces is a play-leg stretcher table in Swartz's exhibit, Doylestown. There are also two very old wing chairs in the show.

The exhibit of Pennsylvania Spatterware attracted the eye of many of the collectors at the opening last night.

Ira S. Reed, who is president and general chairman of the show, and one of the outstanding exhibitors in the New York show this week, has a very rare collection of historical flasks, Stiegel glass, and firearms including old pistols, and Indian relics. His collection of paperweights also attracted attention.

One of the oldest pieces in the show dating back 157 years, is a sundial in the display of Mary B. Atkinson, Doylestown.

Staffordshire figures occupy another prominent place on the show tables.

Among the exhibitors in the show are J. Fabian Cooper, Tullytown; Mrs. William Haven, of Washington Cross-

HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATED
BY MORRISVILLE NINE

By Oscar Corn

The Bristol High "Bunnies" were handed their first defeat in the Lower Bucks County League, yesterday, at the hands of the Morrisville Bulldogs to the tune of 10 to 6.

Due to the numerous errors the Cardinal and Gray men made, and because Morrisville bunched their twelve hits, they were able to come out on top. Bristol smacked out ten hits but they were never bunched and many were wasted.

Morrisville pushed across their ten runs in three innings, five in the second, four in the fourth, and one in the sixth.

In the second, with one on and two out, Edwards doubled to score Klienfelder. MacPherson walked, and Nowlanski singled to score Edwards and MacPherson, while he scored on an error. Three hits; five runs.

With one down in the fourth, Nowlanski doubled, Seltzer reached first via an error, and Swope loaded bases with his single. Mattis fled out to make it two outs. Malmesburg hit an easy one which was badly overthrown, and three men crossed the plate. Klienfelder then singled to score Malmesburg. Three hits; four runs.

To wind up their scoring, Morrisville scored Mattis, in the sixth, after he walked and Klienfelder reached first on an error, which did the damage.

Bristol's first runs came in the third when Oppman walked, and Stallone singled to score him. Rockhill reached first on an error, then Dick, Spencer and Gibson walked, forcing Rockhill home.

In the fourth, Fry walked and was scored on Oppman's triple. Stallone then sacrificed him home.

Gibson scored for Bristol on Hibbs' triple in the fifth, while Stallone scored, in the sixth, on Rockhill's double.

"Johnny" Stallone took the hitting honors, yesterday, with a clean slate of 1,000 per cent. He was up four called times, and he hit a triple, two singles and a double.

On Tuesday, May 1, on the high school diamond, the Cardinal and Gray "Bunnies" will meet the Northeast Catholic High nine, of Philadelphia.

NAMES MAN WHO SHOT HER

Philadelphia, April 27—In a half-delirious moment of frenzy when informed her life was hanging in the balance, a confessed sweetheart of a slain gangster today gasped out the name of the man who sent a bullet through her breast to seal her lips. "I knew too much and they were afraid I'd talk," she sobbed into the ear of a Department of Investigation agent at her bedside in the Delaware County Hospital, Upper Darby. The woman, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine, 20, confessed that she deserted her husband, a Montreal steel worker, for the love of George Phillips, who was shot to death in a gun battle with Washington, D. C., police on April 12.

Blackshirts In Britain
Being Taken Seriously

Every fourth Blackshirt had a Mosley moustache, grown or growing. A few Blackshirts wore war decorations. Most Blackshirts however were twenty to twenty-five years old, too young to have been in the war. Besides the uniformed Mosleyites, only a few score people in the whole audience wore the party emblem. On the ground floor the more expensive seats were occupied by middle-class folk who smiled in a superior manner as Mosley appeared and the galleries broke out in an avalanche of jeers. The Blackshirts raised their stiff-arm salute. The galleries booed still louder.

For two minutes Mosley stood and let them yell. He was dressed as usual in the black jersey, black trousers, broad black leather belt of the movement. Like Hitler, he wore no insignia of rank. He stood, tall, robust, his shoulders back in military fashion, chest out, head up, hands on his hips, tilting his head back, regarded the crowd through arrogantly lowered eyelids.

He began to speak. He spoke at first in a coldly menacing tone, as though he were speaking with gritted teeth. The menace had a curious effect, in two minutes he had reduced the tumult to scattered shouting. In ten minutes with the help of his Blackshirts who threatened individual hecklers, he had perfect quiet.

His voice had something of the penetrating quality of Trotsky the greatest Russian orator. His opening style was reminiscent of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, the best Nazi speaker. Toward the close, as he felt the audience growing less and less hostile he worked himself into the fury of Adolf Hitler. He is definitely a better speaker than Hitler. He is at least as good as Goebbels. Britons who hate him admit he is the best platform speaker in these isles.

He developed his program for a "corporate state" to make Britain economically self-sufficient. He told them Britain still was dependent on foreign countries to take thirty per cent. of her production. Foreign countries were ceasing to buy. They were putting up tariff walls to keep out British goods. Behind these walls they had already substituted their own factories for the British factories that had formerly supplied them.

"Are we to believe," he asked, "That foreign countries will undo all that, that they will ruin themselves to save us? Do you think we can increase our export trade to give work to 2,300,000 men? No, our only salvation is to substitute the home market for the foreign market."

"To do that we must exclude all foreign goods that can possibly be produced in this country. No fooling with tariff and quotas. We stand on the clearcut platform of complete exclusion plus planning and regulation to prevent price rise and exploitation."

"But to consume these goods we must have increased purchasing power. That is impossible under the present system wherein if one individual raises wages and salaries, another does not but undercuts him. We must put up wages and salaries over the whole field of industry." Here Mosley got his first ringing applause.

"We are convinced," he declared, "that the 200,000,000 pounds worth of foodstuffs we now import yearly from abroad can be produced in this country. To do this we must give the farmer a fair price, with a stable currency, and cut out the middlemen. So under Fascism you raise wages in town and give the farmers higher prices."

Applause grew. It swelled higher at Mosley's anti-Semitic references. He never referred to Jews by name but used a phrase such as "A few British patriots from the Orient who are making enormous fortunes on the Stock Exchange," or "Those patriots with foreign names in the city of London" or "Those great interests in the city of London, largely in the hands of men without a drop of British blood in their veins."

A government of authority, he insisted, was necessary to carry out a program that would mean the loss of profits to the "powers" now controlling British politics. But, he protested, "Our dictatorship will not mean government against the will of the people. We intend to get a Parliamentary majority. On that mandate we do mean to dictate."

Fist driving powerfully through the air, he wound up with a peroration. "We are the greatest economic unit on earth. What we can't produce ourselves we can get from our Empire. Within the borders of this great civilization we can establish a standard of living such as has never been experienced in history."

Applause swept the house. Yells from the galleries showed some were not convinced. Scuffles, the sound of a falling body and, a little knot of Blackshirts indicated the silencing of one heckler. A young man announced that contributions would be taken. Baskets passed through the audience.

While coins clinked, Mosley did something Hitler never did. He asked for questions, first written, then oral, slips of paper poured in. He took them all in a heap, and without looking at them in advance, read them out to the audience, and answered each. Sample answers:

"Fascism does not mean war. It means reduction of the struggle for markets, chief cause of war."

"We are for giving England an air force equal to the strongest on the continent."

"We are not anti-Semitic but we will judge Jews on their merits as Britons."

"We could give Ireland a chance to stay in the Empire but if she wanted to leave we would exclude her goods from the Empire."

"Every Blackshirt subscribes one shilling a month if employed or fourpence if unemployed."

"Jews are not admitted to our party because they have announced their hostility to us and a man would be a fool who would admit avowed enemies to his ranks."

The Berkeley Bullet

By BURNLEY

BACK in the form that made him supreme in the 220-yard dash several years ago, blond Bob Kiesel, ace sprinter of the University of California, is once more burning up the Pacific Coast cinder paths.

Kiesel, who created a sensation in 1932 by saying that he wasn't interested in making the Olympic team, but only competed for his college, was bothered by a leg injury last season, and failed to compete in most of the big track events.

Reports from the recent Coast track meets seem to indicate that Bullet Bob has fully recovered from this ailment. The chunky towhead from Berkeley has run away from his opposition in both sprints during the past month or so, and he is pointing for the N. C. A. A. meet scheduled for Los Angeles in June.

Kiesel's great sprinting has been one of the features of the early season outdoor track meets on the Pacific Coast. Other Coast aces who deserve their share of the limelight for recent performances include Jimmy Luvall, sensational negro quarter-miler of the University of California at Los Angeles, Johnny Lyman, Stanford's burly shot-put marvel, and Walter Marty, the phenomenal frog of Fresno, who of late has been leaping to unbelievable heights.

Stanford is grooming a possible successor to Ben Eastman in Al Blackman, brilliant young quarter-miler, who recently pressed Luvall to the limit.
